Turbine Fuel (ATF) prices, rising employee costs ageing fleet and intense price competition among the airline operators have been the main reasons for the losses. The erstwhile Air India and Indian Airlines have incurred a net loss of Rs. 447.93 crores and Rs. 240.29 crores respectively during the year 2006-07.

(c) and (d) In order to improve the operational performance and profitability, the Government has approved the merger of Air India and Indian Airlines into National Aviation Company of India Limited.

Further, the airlines have been permitted to add more capacity by purchasing 111 state-of-the-art new aircraft. Other commercial measures such as route rationalization along with introduction of services on new routes, product improvement and joining of 'Star Alliance' have been taken by NACIL. These are expected to boost the profits of the company.

(e) while Air India (IC) links Raipur and Bhopal with air connectivity to/from Delhi and Mumbai, there is no proposal at present to operate between Raipur and Bhopal.
